MONDAY MORNING, JUNE 15.

THE Democratic press is just now very industriously quoting from the New York Tribune a declaration made ome months ago in favor of the en franchisement of the blacks in all the tates. North and South, and comparing of the Chicago platform which sets forth that while the National Govern must guarantee suffrage to the black men in the South, the question of suffrage in the loyal States properly belongs to the people of those States Remarkable to say the Tribune of a ner date and the platform of the date do not agree-and lo! a ireadful mare's nest! The party orcareful how they institute such tests as this, for it is more than possible their slightly different from their declara tions in advance of it. We commend this suggestion especially to the Wheel-ing Register in view of the probable nomination of Chase on a negro suf frage platform the Tribune, everybody knows that the average Republican opinion of the country has very seldom agreed with the especial crotchets of that journal, one was examined by the morning, and purged himself of of the rebellion "universal suffrage and universal suffrage and purged himself of this contempt by answering all of the universal suffrage and purged himself of the contempt by answering all of the universal suffrage and purged himself of the contempt by answering all of the universal suffrage and purged himself of the contempt by answering all of the universal suffrage and purged himself of the contempt of the contempt by answering all of the universal suffrage and purged himself of the contempt by answering all of the universal suffrage and purged himself of the contempt by answering all of the universal suffrage and purged himself of the contempt by answering all of the universal suffrage and purged himself of the contempt by answering all of the universal suffrage and universal suffrage and the suffrage and universal suffrage and the suffrage and universal suffrage and uni scial crotchets of that journal, one without reference to the more dollars in Baltimore, New York, Bos The Republican party of the United States has very great confi unselfishness, but not so auch in-his judgment upon practical notable instances been widely at variance with Mr. Greeley, who generally flattering to Pendleton, who, it appears, orrects himself by the cooler judgment of his friends and falls into line. The not in any respect responsible or Mr. Greeley's opinions. He is one member of the party; and in the mat-ter of suffrage holds the same views as ir. Chase, the prospective candidate of entertains a different opinion, as ex-pressed at Chicago. Mr. Greeley, in his gushing and ill-judged benevolence would enfranchise blacks and rebels alike, North and South. The Republican party holds that the rebel States stand wholly different footing from loyal States. The rebel population in the one have rendered it the impera-tive duly of the Government there to enfranchise the blacks. It is the only way in which civil government can be restored on a basis of loyalty to the United States. That party also holds that in the Northern States, where no such extraordinary conditions exist, no such extraordinary exercise of power by the General Government is neces-sary. This is the simple aspect in which this question stands. Those who ask us to ignore these different conditions in the two sections and deal with the loyal States as we do with the rebellious States are the same persons who have constantly asked us to ignore the fact of the rebellion from first to last. They are the same persons who claim that the rebels are not justly under any disabilities whatever on account of their treason. Whenever we are ready to accede to their arrogant claim that the rebellion was just, the rebels patriots, and the General Government a tyrant and oppressor, we shall acknowledge that the loyal people of the nation have no right to prescribe the conditions on which the rebellions States may resume

The State Democratic Convention of Tennessee was held on Tuesday, at Nashville, The committee on ne nations reported the name of Humthe National Democratic Convention.

A motion was made to substitute Gen. A motion was made to substitute Gen, N. B. Forrest. After a full debate, this motion was carried, and Forrest was chosen. During the debate, not a solitary member objected to either Forrest's Democracy or to his character. He was conceded by to he a firstrate Democrat. The only objection made to him by those who favored Bate, was that, although he was eminently worthy of Democratic honors, yet it might not be politic to put him forward just yet, on account of certain prejudices prevailing at the North gainst notorious rebels, and partienlarly against the guerrilla and "butchlarly against the guerrilla and "butch-er." This objection, however, was overborne, and Forrest was elected by a clear two-thirds vote. This infa-mous rebel chief, therefore, will cast the vote of one important State, and perhaps, control the Democratic nomi-nation for President, and the Democratic party platform. Hon, REVERDY JOHNSON WAS nomitheir power in the Government-not where there are no unusual grounds of objection. Mr. Johnson's is probably mously adopted.

We hope Miss Anthony with as unobjectionable an appointment as Prof. Joly 4th, for the purpose of fulfilling this cheefful hope by securing in the Democratic platform a recognition of woman's right to the elective fundation. We hope Miss Anthony will present the reself and, furthermore, that Mr. This ton, as we think he is duly bound to do, will back her application for admission. It would be a decided novelty to find the Democracy esponsing both negro suffrage and woman's rights.

Grant and Washburne Gen, A. Townsend thus writes to th

Galena, but Grant was a new-comer there, and Washburne was alway from home in Congress three-fourths of the year. Grant's father sent for his aon not long before the war, and offered him eight hundred dollars as year to take charge of his leather and hide business. Grant went to work, made few acquaint-ances, and-was one of the most unknown men in Galena. raise a company in Galetin, and as it was known to a few that Grant had been a Captain in the, he army was looked to as the proper man to be chalrman. Mr. Washburne described to me this hard-working, commonly dressed man, with an old, faded dragoon cloak upon his shoulders, mounting to the bench of the Court House and stating the object of the meeting. When the company was raised Grant was found to be perfect in all the details or equipping it from boots to buttons. Washburne, Grant and the rest took the company down to Springdied. These with scanty means, paying three dollars a day for board, Grint waited the disciplinative process of the State authorities, with blick Yates impracticable as now, at the head of the State. Finally Grant said to Washburne.

the head of the State. Finally Grant self to Washburne:

"I can do nothing here? I am running short; I shall go home and go to work."

"Hold on!" said Washburne. At last Grant was placed in the Adjutant General? Department, and by happy luck was one day placed at the head of a regiment afflicted with a drunken Colonel. So began the fame which has gone round the world.

Washburne's relations with Grant are nothing more than those between two friends who believe in each other. Washburne's minds in Grant latent abilities developing every day, powers coming out of his modesty like a bee's nest in a violet bed. He had no aid whatever in writing any of his letters or battle bulletins. The celebrated dispatch, "I will fight it out on this line if takes all stimmer" was brought from Spottsylvania to Washington in Mr. Washburne's pocket. Hesaid to Grant as he quitted the field:

would be well," returned Washburne,

people." "Very well."
Genoral Grant sat down in the teat,
and as quickly as he could transcribe.

Genoral Grant sat down in the tent, and as quickly as he could transcribe, and without reading the message over, gave it to Washburne, sealed. The latter came to Bell Plain, took a bout, landed at the Navy Yard, rode in a horse car to the War Department, where he found everybody blue and doubtful, and delivered the letter to Stanton. That simple bulletin thrilled the country and went into the epigram matic literature of mankind.
